Re: Oral Ex Parte Notification
CG Docket Nos. 04-53, 02-278 – In the Matter of Rules and Regulations Implementing the Controlling the Assault of Non-Solicited Pornography and Marketing Act of 2003; Rules and Regulations Implementing the Telephone Consumer Protection Act of 1991

Dear Ms. Dortch:

On July 13, 2004, Frank Triveri of Nextel Communications, Inc. ("Nextel"), Don Girsakis of Boost Mobile and the undersigned, counsel for Nextel and its subsidiaries, met with Gene Fullano, Leon Jackler, Erica McMahon, Nathan Olson, Richard Smith, and Ruth Yodaiken of the Consumer and Governmental Affairs Bureau, Richard Hovey and James Miller of the Office of Engineering and Technology, and Christina Clearwater, Jennifer Salhus, and Nese Guendelsberger of the Wireless Telecommunications Bureau, regarding the Commission's implementation of the Controlling the Assault of Non-Solicited Pornography and Marketing Act of 2003 (the "CAN-SPAM Act") in the above-referenced proceeding.

These discussions reflected the comments filed by Nextel in this proceeding. Among other subjects, we discussed the special needs of providers of pre-paid wireless services to communicate with their customers through mobile messages. We also recommended that the Commission either (a) clarify that messages from a commercial mobile radio service (CMRS) carrier to its customers regarding communications-related services and products offered by the carrier fall within the "transactional or relationship message" exemption under Section 3(17) of the CAN-SPAM Act; or (b) exempt such messages from the general requirement to obtain recipients' prior express consent, pursuant to the Commission's authority under Section 14(b)(3) of the Act. We noted that the Commission's adoption of the exemption under Section 14(b)(3) would trigger that provision's self-activating requirement that carriers "allow their subscribers to indicate a desire not to receive future mobile commercial messages from the provider (1) at the time of subscribing to such service, and (2) in any billing mechanism." In addition to expressing Nextel's full support for this requirement to give customers the opportunity to refuse such messages from their carriers, we explained that CMRS carriers have every business incentive to limit such communications to their customers. We also suggested that, in defining the exempted messages as those regarding communications-related services and products offered by the CMRS provider, the Commission refer to the definition of "communications-related services" under 47 C.F.R. § 64.2003 and other Customer Proprietary Network Information rules adopted by the Commission to implement 47 U.S.C. § 222. Finally, we suggested that the Commission impress upon the Federal Trade Commission the impracticability of imposing on senders of mobile service commercial messages the same disclosure requirements that apply to other commercial email messages, given (a) the text character limitations of mobile messages and (b) the annoyance and costs to recipients to access and review mobile phone messages that contain such detailed disclosures.

Pursuant to Section 1.1206(b) of the Commission's rules, an original and one copy of this letter are being submitted to the Secretary's office for the above-captioned docket and a copy is being provided to the members of the Commission staff who attended the meeting. Should there be any questions regarding this filing, please contact the undersigned.

Respectfully submitted,
